Train Load Of Cotton Is Shipped To New York By Cortner Firm

CROWDS JAM THE STADIUM

STAPLE SENT OVER SOUTHERN TO THE PORT OF NEW YORK

Was First Shipment Of Whole Trainload In Cities' History

SPOT MARKET IS 23 CENTS TODAY

Fibre Of the Staple Is Showing Improvement In Late Picking

A solid train load of cotton was shipped over the Southern Railway last night by the R. G. Cortner company, local brokers. The shipment was destined for the port of New York. This is the first train load of cotton to be shipped from local territory, and it marks a great advance in marketing for this section.

This readily places Albany-Decatur on the map as a leading cotton market of North Alabama, and warns the cotton trade that the Twin Cities are to be considered as leaders in the business.

The street price of cotton dropped to 23 cents this morning. The decline is being further aggravated by too hurried marketing. There have been about 500 bales in the city alone today.

The fibre of the staple is improving. Late fall rains have caused the bolls to open more slowly, and to fill up better. The fibre of the early crop was unusually short, but the present pickings are coming out fine and silky. The late picking is expected to be still finer.

Cotton Seed Market

The cotton seeds products market was effected with the government reports in a large measure, as was the cotton market. The movement of seed so far has been about as usual, with a steady rise in the amount handled. The mills of the South are expecting to crush more seeds this year, perhaps, than last on account of the larger crops.

Oil mills are more or less cautious in the purchase of seeds due to excess moisture in seeds coming from some parts. As is well known, excess moisture causes seed to heat and deteriorate in storage.

LOCAL PEOPLE TO SPEND DAY AT FAIR

Ten Automobiles Will Take Twin Citizens To Moulton

A number of local people are planning to attend the community fair at Moulton Friday, leaving here at nine o'clock tomorrow morning and spending the entire day in the Lawrence County capital. The trip will be made in approximately 10 automobiles. W. W. Rahm, president of the chamber of commerce stated.

A cordial invitation was extended to all persons who desire to make the trip to make arrangements through the chamber of commerce to go, as it is desired to have as many visitors as possible from here at the fair Friday.

ENGLISH HOUSE TO BE DISSOLVED AND ELECTIONS HELD

Private Council At the Palace Held With King George

LABOR MINISTRY GETS A SET-BACK

McDonald Government Is Defeated By Commons

(Associated Press)

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The house of commons will be dissolved tonight and a general election will be held October 29, it was announced this afternoon after King George held a private council at Buckingham palace, at which he signed a proclamation proroguing parliament.

The announcement of the date for the election, which will define the political complexion of the government, which will succeed Great Britain's first labor ministry was made after Prime Minister McDonald's coming this afternoon before the house, which last night defeated his government declared that the King had assented to his request for the dissolution of parliament, which will be prorogued tonight.

The prorogation, Mr. McDonald said, would be conditional upon the final passage of the bill, creating an Irish boundary commission.

It is understood, however, that there will be no difficulty in giving the bill its final reading in the house of Lords.

The premier also announced that the new parliament would meet a week or two after the date of the general election.

John J. McNamara Under Bond Again

(Associated Press)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 9.—John J. McNamara, who served more than nine years of a 15 year sentence in the California state prison for his alleged connection with the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building in 1910, was arrested here today and held under $20,000 bond on four indictments, returned by the Marion County grand jury, charging blackmail.

McNamara is business agent of local Number 22, of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers Union here. The indictments were the results of a grand jury investigation into recent acts of vandalism at the new Elks clubhouse and on other buildings.

DAVIS BELIEVES NOW THAT HE WILL CARRY NEW YORK STATE

Lieutenant-Governor Says Results Of Tour Revelation To Him

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—John W. Davis democratic nominee for president returned here today from a three day trip through upper and western New York, the result of which he declared to be "highly pleasing and heartening."

The candidate went to his hotel headquarters for a brief visit and left the city a short while later for his home in Locust Valley to rest and prepare for his second invasion of the middle west, scheduled to begin with his departure from here Friday evening for Indiana.

On the western tour Mr. Davis will go first to Richmond and Indianapolis, Ind., arriving Saturday. A swing through LaFayette and Terre Haute will be made and later visits to Springfield and East St. Louis, Ill., St. Louis, Mo., Nashville, Tenn., Louisville, Ky., Evansville, Ind., Cincinnati, O., and to New York City by October 25.

BOND SUIT WILL BE HEARD SATURDAY

Unusual Case Is Set for Hearing Before Judge Kyle

On Saturday the Selma Bank and Trust company, represented by A. J. Harris, will seek authority from Judge Osceola Kyle, circuit court judge, to sell property of the Alabama Traction company here in order to secure payment from that company of several thousand dollars said to be due from the traction company to the city of Decatur.

The Selma concern owns certain bonds said to be secured by assessments against the traction company's local property. It is understood that Eyster and Eyster, local attorneys of the traction company, will ask Judge Kyle to hold that the statute under which the assessments in question were made, is unconstitutional.

It is expected the traction company will present its case in the form of a demurrer. Whether Judge Kyle overrules or upholds the demurrer it is expected the case will be appealed to the supreme court of the state, at attorneys stated.

LOCAL GROTTO CLUB WINS FIRST PRIZE IN KAMRAM CEREMONY

Hundred Dollar Fund Won By Albany And Decatur

BIG ATTENDANCE FROM TWIN CITIES

Candidates Class From Here Largest Of Ceremonial

Members of the Albany-Decatur Grotto club, who attended the great Grotto ceremonial at Birmingham yesterday to the number of about 150 have returned home elated over their visit to the Magic City.

The local Grotto club made the best showing at the Birmingham celebration of any having representatives at the large gathering, winning first prize for furnishing the largest number of candidates for admission into the Kamram Grotto.

The prize was one hundred dollars and that amount is now safe in the treasury of the Albany-Decatur club.

Following the ceremonies when hundreds were admitted into the large Grotto club at Birmingham official records show that over 9,000 men belong to it, making that organization the largest one of its kind in the entire world.

The celebration began yesterday with parades, led by numerous marching clubs from a number of cities in Alabama and also from some cities outside the state.

William V. Davidson stated that the members of the parade proceeded on foot four abreast, and that the line seemed to Mr. Davidson "to be as long as from here to Athens."

Some accounts, Mr. Davidson stated place the length of the parade at only one mile, but that he cannot agree that the line was that short.

In speaking of the amusing happenings on the street outside the Birmingham Masonic Temple, headquarters for the Grotto visitors, Mr. Davidson said that certain electric shocks given to the inspecting, came first. He stated that he had just purchased himself a 10 cent cigar and was feeling fine when he was touched by the strange device, and that as a result he jumped several feet losing his cigar.

Some who felt the electric discharge started to run, stated Mr. Davidson.

The final exercises of the celebration were held at Woodrow Wilson park, stated Mr. Davidson, and continued far into Wednesday night.

Book By Dr. Steel Is Received Here

The first installment of Dr. Samuel A. Steel's series of volumes entitled "The Sunny Road" has been printed in book form and is now on sale here. Dr. Steel's book tells of "Home life in Dixie during the War."

It is prefaced by an original poem of the author: "The Confederate Flag." Dr. Steel writes from the view point of a Southerner of the Southerners. He says in his foreword that "there is enough tabasco in each volume to make the reader need a glass of water nearby." The book contains 160 pages all delightfully reading concerning the doings and sayings of "a time that tried men's souls."

Many stories of the civil war not hitherto published are told by Dr. Steel from memory.

In speaking of his book Dr. Steel, who is now in his 76th year, said with his usual bright smile: "Don't you come telling me my tales are made up. I don't deal in second hand goods. They are all original stuff."

DECATUR PAVING MAY BE FINISHED BY 'END OF YEAR'

Paving Is Likely to Cost Less Than Had Been Expected

COST IS REDUCED BELOW ESTIMATE

Brownlee States Good Progress Being Made In Paving

If the present rate of speed is kept up (2,000 square yards of concrete, and 2,000 yards of asphalt paving per day) "before the end of this year," the Independent Paving company will have completed its street building contract for the city of Decatur, stated Superintendent Brownlee, this morning.

Mr. Brownlee said he was glad to announce that the cost of the streets instead of reaching $300,000 the allowance made by the city when the street bond issue was voted, he hoped to turn in a bill for only about $250,000 or $50,000 less than the original estimates. The Superintendent stated that low costs were obtained on the Independent Paving company had much of its street building machinery in Albany ready to begin work at once after the Decatur contract was let and because the city engineer had been able to reduce some of the original estimates and "because we have a corps of trained and efficient workers."

The Official List of the Streets Mr. Brownlee furnished the following list showing the streets to be completed by his company in Decatur:

Pond and Canal, Line and Oak, Vine and Walnut, Cherry and Cain, Ferry and Church, Railroad and from the underpass to Danville road, West Vine and West Vine extended.

Mr. Brownlee stated that the concrete foundations being laid by his company met all the requirements of the experts of the federal government charged with the responsibility of testing road building materials.

He stated that such high grade material was being laid at only 17 cents more per square yard than the stone foundations cost.

He claimed for the concrete that it was impossible for water to penetrate it.

There are at present seven companies of workers, building streets for the Independent Paving company in Decatur. The weekly pay roll amounts to $4,000 stated Mr. Brownlee.

The seven companies are: concrete mixers, asphalt mixers, concrete layers, asphalt spreaders, curb and gutter workers, with two companies engaged in grading.

In speaking of the number of miles of paving the city would have when his company completes its contract Mr. Brownlee stated that his estimate, was about six miles. "I am sure I can say without contradiction, that Decatur is getting first class paving at the lowest cost for similar type. any city has been able to secure in this part of Alabama," concluded Mr. Brownlee.

Child Is Victim Of Mrs. Candler's Car

(Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—King baseball was back in Washington today, prepared to put on his final act of the world's series classic of 1924 in one or two scenes, depending upon the success of the Senators in their tilt with the New York Giants in the sixth game for baseball's premier honor.

Once again the nation's capital thrust aside its other business to jam its way into Griffith stadium where today the American league pennant winners, with their backs to the wall, must defeat the Giants or yield finally their hope of world championship.

No waning of enthusiasm or hope among local fandom was evident in the crowds that lay siege to the ticket booth at the stadium for the several thousand bleacher seats, put on sale at 9 a. m. All other spaces in the ground had been sold out long before the outcome of the New York game had been determined.

The Washington Senators, now facing odds in their valiant fight for their first baseball championship, came back home today for the sixth battle of the 1924 series.

Despite two defeats in their three games at New York, the damaging loss of Roger Peckinpaugh, star short stop and the heart breaking setback for their hurling ace, Walter Johnson, the Senators still are in a fighting mood.

Victory today for the Giants, who hold a three to two edge, will clinch McGraw's fourth diamond crown, but a come-back by Washington will force the issue to the limit of seven games in a final struggle here tomorrow.

Bucky Harris, fighting manager of the Senators, is banking upon Zachary and his slow southpaw curves to stop the Giants this afternoon, although the National leaguers drove him from the box in the ninth inning of the second game, he pitched strongly for the most part.

"We're far from discouraged," declared Harris as he led his squad on the field, shortly before noon for a brisk workout and batting practice, in SHENANDOAH 'COALED'

Son Is Accused Of Attacking Mother

(Associated Press)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 9.—Mrs. Greenbury Redditt, wife of a farmer and her daughter, Susie, aged 16, were found today by neighbors at their farm home near Cardova, with their skulls crushed by blows with an axe alleged to have been wielded by the woman's son, Quimby Redditt, aged 18.

Mrs. Redditt and her daughter were still alive and were rushed to Memphis. It is stated, however, that they will probably die. The youth was arrested and brought to jail here.

No motive for the act has been ascertained, but the theory is advanced that the youth, said by the neighbors to have been mentally sub-normal, possibly became angered because of some fancied wrong.

It was stated that he made no statement to persons who took him into custody. When the tragedy occurred the elder Redditt, husband of the wounded woman and father of the two children, was on his way to Memphis to market produce raised on the farm.

Mrs. Redditt is said to have formerly lived near Sawtelle landing, Ark., and is a sister of Ernest Williford, an Arkansas planter.

which Nick Altrock, deserting his clown act for serious business, served 'em up.

"The breaks were against us in New York," continued Harris, "but I think they are due for a turn in our favor. Zachary will pitch and I think Peck will be back at his old post."

After the early breaks that swept the Polo Grounds yesterday, the warming rays of a bright sun seemed welcome relief. There were a few thousand of the faithful on hand to welcome the Griffith men back and shortly after noon the temporary niche of bleachers in far right-center was filled, chiefly by admirers of "Goose" Goslin, slugging outfielder who has a particular fondness for hitting homers to this section of the field.

The line ups: Washington: McNeely, cf.; Harris, 2b.; Rice, rf.; Goslin, lf.; Judge, 1b.; Bluege, 3b.; Peck, ss.; Ruel, c.; Zachary, p.

New York: Lindstrom, 3b.; Frisch, 2b.; Young, rf.; Kelly, 1b.; Meusel, lf.; Wilson, cf.; Jackson, ss.; Gowdy, c.; Nehf, p.

First inning—Giants—Bluege took Lindstrom's bunt and threw him out Frisch got a two base hit into right by hard running. Zachary took Young's splash and Frisch was run down, Zachary to Bluege to Harris. Young went to second. Kelly singled to center, Young scoring. Rice leaped up in the air and took Meusel's long drive that was headed into the bleachers with his gloved hand. One run, two hits, no errors.

Senators—McNeely was given a base on balls. Harris forced McNeely, Lindstrom to Frisch. Harris was caught off first, the play being Nehf to Kelly to Jackson. Rice sent a line single into right. Kelly mused up Goslin's grounder and the batter was safe, Rice going to second. It was an error for Kelly. Judge fanned. No runs, one hit, one error.

Second inning—Giants—Wilson was a strike out victim. Harris took Jackson's slow roller and threw him out. Gowdy got a Texas leaguer into right. Nehf popped to McNeely. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Senators—Frisch threw out Bluege at first. Peck up. The crippled shortstop got a big hand. He scratched a hit off Lindstrom's glove. Ruel flied out to Meusel. Zachary was a strike out victim. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third inning—Giants—Rice took a hit away from Lindstrom with a fine running catch. Frisch got another two base hit to right. Harris threw out Young. Frisch going to third. Bluege threw out Kelly and the danger was over. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Senators—McNeely sent up a high one to Jackson. Jackson took Harris' hopper and got him at first. Rice fouled out to Lindstrom. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth inning—Giants—Peck threw out Meusel. Wilson singled into right. Jackson hit into a double play, Harris to Peck to Judge. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Senators—Young stood still and took Goslin's hoist. Jackson took Judge's slow roller. Jackson threw out Bluege. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fifth inning—Giants—Peck took Gowdy's grass cutter and had him easily at first. Rice robbed Nehf of a hit by coming in back of first base and catching the ball near the foul line. Lindstrom went out, Zachary to Judge. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Senators—Peck singled into left. Ruel sacrificed Nehf to Kelly. Zachary went out to Kelly unassisted Peck going to third. McNeely walked on four straight balls. McNeely stole second.

MRS. ELSIE SWEETIN, INA IVA, METHODIST CHURCH & DR. MRS. D. M. HIGHT

The Rev. Dr. Lawrence M. Hight, pastor of the Methodist Church at Ina, Ill., under arrest at Mount Vernon, has confessed that he killed his wife with arsenic and that he had previously murdered Wilford Sweetin by giving him the same poison. He gave Sweetin the poison when the latter was ill and declared he slew both "to end their suffering." Hight denied he killed the pair so as to be able to make love to Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, as had been rumored. Mrs. Sweetin is ill over the affair. She denied caring for Hight and declared she always loved her husband.

SPORTS
CENTRAL PLANS VENGEANCE ON ROGERSVILLE HERE ON FRIDAY

Central high comes back from the defeat at the hands of Jasper last week with the intention of reaping dire vengeance upon the unsuspecting Rogersville squad next Friday. The local aggregation has a stronger team and is in better condition than when they met the Jaspers. Three new men have joined the team within the last week and Coach Webb announces that they will probably change the lineup considerably. "Faults to be remedied and favors to be commended were brought out in the last game.

The slight taste of blood has put ginger into the team, and taken away the danger of stage fright. Injuries have forced Johnson out of practice for a short time, but he will be in Friday's game. Several new men have joined the team and offer strong competition in several departments. Handy, one of these is all the name implies and has already cinched a position at half. The showing of last week has resulted in several changes in the lineup. The following men, according to Coach Webb, will start the game: Papenburg, RE; Spencer, RT; Zanvit, RG; Peterson, C; Undecided, LG; Mitchell, LT; Lee, (C); LE; Tuck, Q; Johnson, HB; Handy, HB; Gier, F.

Local Boys Will Hike on Saturday

There is going to be another boys' hike Saturday under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. and in charge of S. E. Arvidson, physical director. Destination this time of the hikers will be the main entrance to Salt Petre cave in Trinity mountain, which is about two miles beyond Trinity.

Every young fellow that goes on this hike should carry a good healthy lunch, and also a flash-light or lantern. Boys nine years of age and over are eligible to make the trip, and they need not be members of the Y. M. C. A. Party will leave the Association building at 8:00 o'clock Saturday morning.

Lumber Company Has Big Fire Loss

(Associated Press)
CONROE, Texas, Oct. 9.—Fire which broke out in the plant of the Delta Land and Timber company here at 9 a. m. today has caused damage estimated at $1,000,000 by noon, when it was still raging unchecked and threatening destruction of the entire property at a loss of $3,000,000.

PASTOR HURT
Owing to a slight sprain of his back Dr. Samuel A. Steel was confined to his room last evening and was unable to attend the revival meeting in progress at his church. He was greatly improved today and attended the 10 o'clock service at his church this morning.

Johnson Man On It After This Season

(Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Walter Johnson said after he was beaten for the second time during the world's series by the Giants, that it was doubtful if he would play ball next year.

The big pitcher who waited 18 years to get into baseball's classic, would not elaborate on his statement, but did deny a report that he had bought stock in the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League. "I could not hold them," he said, referring to the game which he evidently considered to be his last appearance in a world series if not in big league baseball.

"I am sorry," he continued, "I had two chances to beat them, but I could not hold them at either time."

Manager Harris was philosophical. "They made breaks and they beat us," he said. "But we'll catch them tomorrow. Zachary will pitch."

Roger Peckinpaugh, veteran shortstop and captain of the Senators, whose absence because of a charley horse has been severely felt during the last three games, was determined to play today.

"I'll get in that game if I break the leg," he said.

Manager McGraw was in his happy spirits as his team made ready to be escorted by a motor cordon through town to catch the special train engaged to take the players of both teams to Washington shortly before 6 o'clock.

"I think Nehf will be ready to use Thursday," he said. "His hand was in fair shape and 24 hours should make a lot of difference. If Nehf cannot work, Barnes will get another chance."

The veteran manager would not predict an end of the series today. "Washington is a good team, and anything can happen in baseball you know," he said.

A Rat That Didn't Smell After Being Dead for Three Months
"I swear it was dead three months," writes Mr. J. Sykes (N. J.). "I saw this rat every day; put some Rat-Snap behind a barrel. Month afterwards, my wife looked behind the barrel. There it was—dead. Rat-Snap sells in three sizes for 15c, 65c, $1.25. Sold and guaranteed by CADELL DRUG CO."

Coon Hunters Buy Crack Georgia Dog

Local hunters were greatly interested today with the arrival of Tom Redbone Coondog, from Cleveland, Ga.

The animal was bought by a "corporation" of local hunters and is cost $75, provided he proves satisfactory after a 10 days trial.

The kennel owners who sent "Tom" say he is four years of age and that they never owned a more talented dog. Wooster Stinson, had the dog in his possession at the Albany city hall this morning making plans for a coon hunt. The dog arrived last night on Louisville and Nashville train No. 4. He is a beauty but appeared homesick and was often heard to "cry" for his former masters.

A DAILY PRAYER.—Thou has asked us to request great things of Thee; so we pray Thee to remove all despair, sin, fear and doubt.

Goliath is John McGraw, and David is Manager Harris. History seems not about to repeat itself.

Well Walter Johnson will be among the baseball immortals, if he did fail to win twice of late.

It may be when people neglect their business others might look after it for them. They might but will they?

Did the bolt of Brookhart from the republican party have any connection with the recent rise in oat, corn and rye prices?

If the world series should get tied up and continue indefinitely, there will be little money left to contribute toward the election of Mr. Davis.

Press reports from abroad tell of prolonged cheering in the Fatherland at the mention of the name of Woodrow Wilson. But none of the ex-members of the imperial government were the cheer leaders, it is said with emphasis.

Democrats are using "words to cloak their meaning, and simply for the purpose of capturing votes," says T. R., Jr. Another statement that sounds very tame out of the present Roosevelt.

A PUBLIC SERVICE PERFORMED WHEN SCHOOL BOOKS WERE PROVIDED

The movement of those determined to furnish school supplies for needy children was a good and timely one. So frequently have the school text books been changed of late years, that it has become a real burden for many families to buy books for their children who attend school. Time was when the younger children used the books of their elder brothers and sisters.

In some states there is a provision in law allowing children whose parents are financially unable to buy school books, for them to be furnished with money taken from the public funds. It is quite possible, in accordance with the modern opinion to the effect that the state should do all within its power to see that every child gets an education, that free school books will be furnished for all the school children of the state, at some future time.

It speaks well for the public spirit of the people of the Twin Cities that they contributed liberally to the school book fund. And it is a credit to the Kiwanis club, that it took the initiative in having an opportunity given to the public to contribute to a worthy cause.

UNRELENTING INVENTORS

Science and invention combined are gradually but none the less relentlessly piercing the veil of the Mysterious Unknown. By and by there will be no secrets. Every day sees some long-pondered theory shot full of holes.

For instance, there is the new motive picture camera, which takes 25,000 pictures a second as against the camera that made but three hundred exposures a second. By means of this new machine the inventor, a Frenchman, has been enabled to give the world a most magnificent discovery. It shows that a soap bubble, hit by a paper wad, admits the wad, closes the hole and does not burst until the paper wad passes out through the other side of the bubble.

For ages the world has been stumbling blindly along in the belief that the bubble was burst by the initial impact of the paper wad. Such, it seems, is not the case. Think how many years civilization has waited for this newer fact. But it was worth waiting for, was it not? Or was it?—Detroit News.

THE SEARCH FOR THE "MOTHER LODE."

History threatens again to repeat itself. From a somewhat remote California town there comes an item, inconspicuously displayed by those newspapers which saw fit to publish it, that by chance miners who were working in a shaft long abandoned had discovered the lost "mother lode." Upon the truth or falsity of that report much may depend. If it is true, there may be witnessed again, as in former days, the mad rush for gold which began in 1849, or thereabout, and continued intermittently until it was announced that the bonanza mines of California and Nevada had been "worked out" and that the vein of the mother lode had been lost somewhere between the Comstock at Virginia City, and the neighboring California counties.

It has been the dream of prospectors that some day, by some fortuitous happening, they might rediscover this treasure lode, known to bear gold and silver of almost inestimable value. But by some strange freak of the volcanic structure which carried the vein it seemed to be irretrievably buried in the mazes of the high Sierras. Men have, one by one, abandoned their weary task, leaving to others what seemed the almost hopeless search. But now, according to reports, by chance apparently as remote as when "Jim" Butler's mule kicked off the shallow cap that hid the rich ore body at Tonopah, the dream of at least one persistent miner along the abandoned mother lode trail has been realized.

It is interesting, assuming the reported rediscovery of the ore body to be true, to imagine the effect upon adventuresome men and women in all parts of the world. Compared with the means employed to reach the scene in the years following the original discovery of gold in California, the methods of travel now are capable of bringing to the section a million persons where ten were able to reach it in the earlier days. Railway trains, motor cars, airplanes and racing water craft would bring a million, or even more, fortune hunters to the spot almost overnight.

But there can never, except in counterfeit, be reproduced the mining camp of the days of Bret Harte and Mark Twain. Then men worked stubbornly and continuously with pick and shovel, happy if by their industry they could wring from the stubborn earth a few yellow dollars. Today, with the possibility of applying the tremendously powerful machinery which has been developed, the camp would become a bedlam.

There have been, in recent years, many rumors that the mother lode had been relocated. As often has disillusionment followed. But it is not unreasonable to hope that now, or at some time in the future, the lost vein will be "picked up." Geologists agree that the interruption of its course indicates only a "fault," but that no known process exists by which the line can be accurately traced. Its rediscovery must be by a simpler method.—Christian Science Monitor.

THE PEOPLE WANT SATISFACTION ABOUT THAT BASEBALL BRIBE

The question is being raised by lovers of baseball throughout the country, "Whose $500 was it, that a New York player offered for a certain Philadelphia game?" The real fans are not satisfied with the discharge of O'Connell, an outfielder of the New York team and of Dolan, a coach.

Of the New York team understood about the bribe money before it was offered. It is unusual for an outfielder to be carrying $500 of his own money around on a baseball diamond. The story goes that in a casual manner Philadelphia's shortstop was asked for $500 "to throw" the game in question, to make sure the Giants won the National League championship and the right to enter the world series.

O'Connell claims he was acting for others—who were the "others," will be asked by baseball well-wishers until a more definite answer is given. It is said that Judge Landis states there will be "no sweeping investigation." Until the high commissioner of baseball gives some good reasons for not having a further investigation, the baseball fans will not be satisfied.

The president of the National league has been quoted as saying that "everything has been cleared up" in connection with the charge of the Philadelphia shortstop. Everything is about as clear as "mud" concerning the unusual transaction.

The American public hopes the matter will be cleared up. But until it is shown to be the usual and perfectly natural thing for an outfielder to be carrying $500 in his pocket while in uniform, grave doubts will arise, and many will wonder if President Johnson of the American League was not right in all he said, in all he attempted to do.

Baseball is taken seriously. The American people are in earnest desperately in earnest about it being a clean sport. There will be no let up in the demands for a satisfactory explanation as to just why a Philadelphia shotstop was offered $500.

ROUND-THE-WORLD THRILLS

It was expected that the American round-the-world fliers would complete their trip successfully. Such elaborate preparations had been made to aid them and rescue them if anything went wrong that sometimes Americans felt as if much of the sporting quality of the venture had been lost. It develops, however, that there was considerable danger and thrill and romantic adventures in the undertaking after all.

Lieut. Wade reports that the most interesting part of the trip to him was the crossing of the Taurus mountains in Asia Minor, where the machines had to fly single file through a narrow gorge, the wings of the planes nearly touching the sides, and with heavy clouds hanging overhead, while a rushing torrent foamed beneath them.

Lieuts. Nelson and Harding found it thrilling to see pieces of metal and piston rings fly out of the exhaust pipe when an exhaust valve guide broke while they were over the Sind desert, 55 miles from Karachi, India. In the face of such circumstances they admit they were a little uneasy, due to the fact that the country 6,000 feet below was nothing but rough, sandy desert in all directions, and a forced landing on the rolling, hilly and cactus-infested sands would probably wreck the plane.

In French Indo-China, while passing along the edge of a monsoon, Lieuts. Smith and Arnold found themselves saved from ennuui by the sudden appearance of smoke pouring out of their engine. While Smith was making the necessary landing, Arnold seized a fire extinguisher, climbed out of his cockpit, scrambled over the struts of the plane, despite a heavy gale, and got down to the bottom of the engines. He had the fire out promptly upon alighting, even before Smith had climbed out of his seat. A broken part was replaced by a new one brought 50 miles overland on a donkey's back.

And so it goes, through raging blizzards, in regions of everlasting ice, over scorching deserts and across great seas. The American people are glad these men are safely back again, they are glad that Americans made the first flight circling the globe. The length of individual hops, the flying time, the number of gallons of oil and gas consumed, and all that, are important, of which gave these brave adventurers an occasional "kick."—Tuscaloosa News.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin, but the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. When Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, kills Peter in a quarrel suspicion falls on Oliver. A trail of blood is found leading from the body to his doorway. Even Rosamund believes him guilty. Desiring to protect Lionel, Oliver can only protest his innocence; but he obtains from the justices a document, to be produced in case of trial, attesting to the fact that he bears no mark of the recent wound; that therefore the trail of blood, obviously that of the murderer, is not his. A few weeks later trial threatens; and Lionel, crazed with fear that Oliver will reveal the truth, hires a pirate sea-captain, Jasper Leigh, to abduct him and sell him as a galley-slave. With Oliver's disappearance it is assumed he has fled to escape trial. Out at sea Leigh offers, for a price, to take Oliver back to England, and is about to turn back when a great Spanish ship bears down upon them, her guns in action. The Swallow, unarmed, is sunk.

From ambush Sak-el-Bahr, the Hawk of the Sea, directs his own two galleys in an attack on a Spanish ship which has drifted into a haven on the northern coast of Africa. The Spaniard, unprepared, surrenders after a brief engagement.

Of the others Sak-el-Bahr made short work. He offered the privilege of ransom himself to any who might be spared. The Spaniard was claimed by three. The rest he consigned to the care of Biskayne, who acted as his kaptan, or lieutenant. But before doing so he bade the ship's bosun stand forward, and demanded to know what slaves there might be aboard. There were, he learned, but a dozen, employed upon menial duties on the ship—three Jews, seven Moslems, and two heretics—and they had been driven under the hatches when the peril threatened.

By Sak-el-Bahr's orders these were dragged forth from the blackness into which they had been flung. The Moslems, upon discovering that they had fallen into the hands of their own people and that their slavery was at an end, broke into cries of delight and fervent praise of Allah, than whom they swore there was no other God. The three Jews, lithe, stalwart young men in black tunics that fell to their knees and black skull-caps upon their curly black locks, smiled ingratiatingly, hoping for the best, since they were fallen into the hands of people who were nearer akin to them than Christians and allied to them, at least, by the bond of common enmity to Spain and common suffering at the hands of Spaniards.

The two heretics stood in stolid apathy, realizing that with them it was but a case of passing from Charybdis to Scylla, and that they had as little to hope for from heathen as from Christian. One of these was a sturdy, bow-legged fellow, whose garments were little better than rags; his weather-beaten face was of the color of mahogany and his eyes of a dark blue under tufted eyebrows that once had been red—like his hair and beard—but were now thickly intermingled with grey. He was spotted like a leopard on the hands by enormous dark brown freckles.

Of the entire dozen he was the only one that drew the attention of Sak-el-Bahr. He stood dependently before the corsair, with bowed head and his eyes upon the deck, a weary, dejected, spiritless slave who would as soon die as live. Thus some few moments during which the stalwart Moslem stood regarding him; then as if drawn by that persistent scrutiny he raised his dull, weary eyes. At once they quickened, the dullness passed out of them; they were bright and keen as of old. He thrust his head forward, staring in his turn; then in a bewildered way he looked about him at the ocean of swarthy faces under turbans of all colors, and back again at Sak-el-Bahr.

"God's light!" he said at last, in English, to vent his infinite amazement. Then reverting to the cynical manner that he had ever affected and effacing all surprise: "Good day to you, Sir Oliver," said he. "I suppose ye'll give yourself the pleasure of hanging me."

"Allah is great!" said Sak-el-Bahr impassively.

CHAPTER X

THE RENEGADE

How it came to happen that Sak-el-Bahr, the Hawk of the Sea, the Moslem rover, the scourge of the Mediterranean, the terror of Christians and the beloved of Asad-ed-Din, Basha of Algiers, would be one and the same as Sir Oliver Tressilian, the Cornish gentleman of Penarrow, is at long length set forth

In the chronicles of Lord Henry Coade.

Sir Oliver was one of a score of men who were rescued from the sea by the crew of the Spanish vessel that had sunk the Swallow; another was Jasper Leigh, the skipper. All of them were carried to Lisbon, and there handed over to the Court of the Holy Office. Since they were heretics all—or nearly all—it was fit and proper that the Brethren of St. Dominic should undertake their conversion in the first place.

Sir Oliver came of a family that never had been famed for rigidity in religious matters, and he was certainly not going to burn alive if the adoption of other men's opinions upon an extremely hypothetical future state would suffice to save him from the stake. He accepted Catholic baptism with an almost contemptuous indifference. As for Jasper Leigh, it will be conceived that the elasticity of the skipper's conscience was no less than Sir Oliver's, and he was certainly not the man to be roasted for a trifle of faith.

No doubt there would be great rejoicings in the Holy House over the rescue of these two unfortunate souls from the certain perdition that had awaited them. It followed that as converts to the Faith they were warmly cherished, and tears of thanksgiving were profusely shed over them. So much for their heresy. They were completely purged of it, having done penance in proper form at an Auto held on the Rocío at Lisbon, candle in hand and sanbenito on their shoulders. The Church dismissed them with her blessing and an injunction to persevere in the ways of salvation.

Now this dismissal amounted to a rejection. They were, as a consequence, thrown back upon the secular authorities, and the secular authorities had yet to punish them for their offense upon the seas. No offense could be proved, it is true, but the courts were satisfied that this lack of offense was but the natural result of a lack of opportunity. Conversely, they reasoned, it was not to be doubted that with the opportunity the offense would have been forthcoming. Their assurance of this was based upon the fact that when the Spaniard fired across the bows of the Swallow as an invitation to heave to, she had kept upon her course. Thus, with unanswerable Castilian logic was the evil conscience of her skipper proven.

Captain Leigh protested on the other hand that his action had been dictated by his lack of faith in Spaniards and his firm belief that all Spaniards were pirates to be avoided by every honest seaman who was conscious of inferior strength of armaments. It was a plea that won him no favor with his narrow-minded judges.

Sir Oliver fervently urged that he was no member of the crew of the Swallow, that he was a gentleman who found himself aboard her very much against his will, being the victim of a villainous piece of trepanning executed by her venal captain. The court heard his plea with respect, and asked to know his name and rank. He was so very indiscreet as to answer truthfully. The result was extremely educative to Sir Oliver; it showed him how systematically conducted was the keeping of the Spanish archives. The court produced documents enabling his judges to recite to him most of that portion of his life that had been spent upon the seas, and many an awkward little circumstance which had slipped his memory long since, which he now recalled, and which certainly was not calculated to make his sentence lighter.

Had he not been in the Barbados in such a year, and had he not there captured the galleon Maria de la Dolores? What was that but an act of villainous piracy? Had he not scuttled a Spanish carack four years ago in the bay of Funchal? Had he not been with that pirate Hawkins in the affair at San Juan de Ulloa? And so on. Questions poured upon him and engulfed him.

He almost regretted that he had given himself the trouble to accept conversion and all that it entailed at the hands of the Brethren of St. Dominic. It began to appear to him that he had but wasted time and escaped the clerical fire to be dangled on a secular rope as an offering to the vengeful gods of outraged Spain.

So much, however, was not done. The galleys in the Mediterranean were in urgent need of men at the time, and to this circumstance Sir Oliver, Captain Leigh, and some others of the luckless crew of the Swallow owed their lives, though it is to be doubted whether any of them found the matter one for congratulation. Chained each man to fellow, ankle to ankle, with but a short length of links between, they formed part of a considerable herd of unfortunate who were driven across Portugal into Spain and thence southward to Cadiz.

Citizenship Meet Plans Complete

Arrangements have been completed for the "Citizenship" meeting to be held at the local Y. M. C. A. at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon under the auspices of the Twin City League of Woman's Voters. Mrs. Norma Stewart president of the League, who now resides in Birmingham, is expected to preside. Mrs. Stewart has already arrived and is full of enthusiasm for the success of the meeting. She stated that Mrs. Nell Wallace, an official of the Alabama League of Woman's Voters, was expected from Birmingham early Friday morning. Mrs. Stewart stated that Judge L. P. Troup had kindly consented to address the meeting Friday afternoon. Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. Wallace are expected to make addresses at the meeting which will open promptly at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

TO MEET CLASS

Dr. Thomas A. Meadows, director of University Extension for the state university in the Tennessee Valley will meet his local class Friday evening at the Albany high school. Dr. Meadows stated that he would detain the students only 10 or 15 minutes Friday evening as he understood several wish to meet some urgent appointments later in the evening.

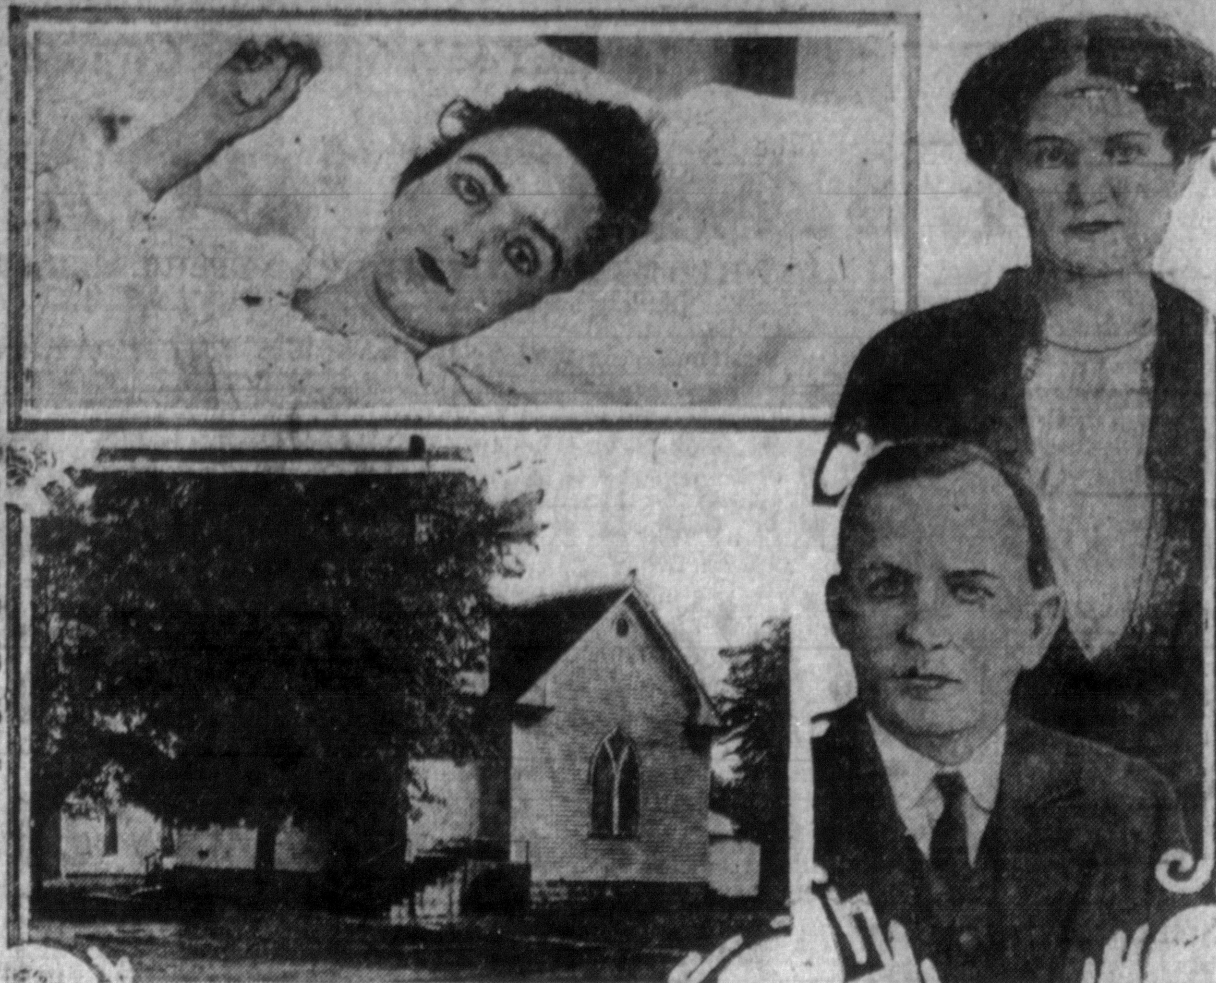

Dr. Meadows went to Town Creek today, where he is organizing a class of students.

ILLINOIS PREACHER ADMITS MURDER OF TWO

MRS. ELSIE SWEETIN, INA, ILL., METHODIST CHURCH & DR. & MRS. L. M. HIGHT

The Rev. Dr. Lawrence M. Hight, pastor of the Methodist Church at Ina, Ill., under arrest at Mount Vernon, has confessed that he killed his wife with arsenic and that he had previously murdered Wilford Sweetin by giving him the same poison. He gave Sweetin the poison when the latter was ill and declared he slew both "to end their suffering." Hight denied he killed the pair so as to be able to make love to Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, as had been rumored. Mrs. Sweetin is ill over the affair. She denied caring for Hight and declared she always loved her husband.

CENTRAL PLANS VENGEANCE ON ROGERSVILLE HERE ON FRIDAY

Central high comes back from the defeat received at the hands of Jasper last week with the intention of reaping dire vengeance upon the unsuspecting Rogersville squad next Friday. The local aggregation has a stronger team and is in better condition than when they met the Jasperites. Three new men have joined the team within the last week and Coach Webb announces that they will probably change the lineup considerably. Faults to be remedied and favors to be commended were brought out in the last game.

The slight taste of blood has put ginger into the team, and taken away the danger of stage fright. Injuries have forced Johnson out of practice for a short time, but he will be in Friday's game. Several new men have joined the team and offer strong competition in several departments. Handy, one of these is all the name implies and has already cinched a position at half. The showing of last week has resulted in several changes in the lineup. The following men, according to Coach Webb, will start the game: Papeburg, RE, Spencer, RT; Zanvit, RG; Peterson, C; Undecided, LG; Mitchell, LT; Lee, (c); IE; Tuck, Q. Johnson, HB, Handy, HB, Gier, F.

The complete schedule of Central follows:
Oct. 10, Rogersville at Albany.
Oct. 18, St. Bernard at Cullman.
Oct. 24, Blount County high at Albany.

Oct. 31, Sheffield at Albany.
Nov. 7, Hartselle at Hartselle.
Nov. 14, Huntsville at Huntsville.
Nov. 21, Open.
Nov. 27, (Thanksgiving) Florence at Florence.

Local Boys Will Hike on Saturday

There is going to be another boys' hike Saturday under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. and in charge of S. E. Arvidson, physical director. Destination this time of the hikers will be the main entrance to Salt Petre cave in Trinity mountain, which is about two miles beyond Trinity.

Every young fellow that goes on this hike should carry a good healthy lunch, and also a flash-light or lantern. Boys nine years of age and over are eligible to make the trip, and they need not be members of the Y. M. C. A. Party will leave the Association building at 8:00 o'clock Saturday morning.

Lumber Company Has Big Fire Loss

(Associated Press)
CONROE, Texas, Oct. 9.—Fire which broke out in the plant of the Delta Land and Timber company here at 9 a. m. today has caused damage estimated at $1,000,000 by noon, when it was still raging unchecked and threatening destruction of the entire property at a loss of $3,000,000.

Johnson May Quit After This Season

(Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Walter Johnson, said after he has been beaten for the second time during the world's series by the Giants, that it was doubtful if he would play ball next year.

The big pitcher who waited 18 years to get into baseball's classic, would not elaborate on his statement, but did deny a report that he had bought stock in the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League. "I could not hold them," he said, referring to the game which he evidently considered to be his last appearance in a world series if not in big league baseball.

"I am sorry," he continued. "I had two chances to beat them, but I could not hold them at either time."

Manager Harris was philosophical. "They made breaks and they beat us," he said. "But we'll catch them tomorrow. Zackary will pitch."

Roger Peckinpah, veteran shortstop and captain of the Senators, whose absence because of a charley horse has been severely felt during the last three games, was determined to play today.

"I'll get in that game if I break the leg," he said.

Manager McGraw was in his happy spirits as his team made ready to be escorted by a motor cordon through town to catch the special train engaged to take the players of both teams to Washington shortly before 6 o'clock.

"I think Nehf will be ready to use Thursday," he said. "His hand was in fair shape and 24 hours should make a lot of difference. If Nehf cannot work, Barnes will get another chance."

The veteran manager would not predict an end of the series today.

"Washington is a good team, and anything can happen in baseball you know," he said.

Coon Hunters Buy Crack Georgia Dog

Local hunters were greatly interested today with the arrival of Tom Redbone Coondog, from Cleveland, Ga.

The animal was bought by a "corporation" of local hunters and is cost $75, provided he proves satisfactory after a 10 days trial.

The kennel owners who sent "Tom" say he is four years of age and that they never owned a more talented dog. Wooster Stinson, had the dog in his possession at the Albany city hall this morning making plans for a coon hunt. The dog arrived last night on Louisville and Nashville train No. 4. He is a beauty but appeared homesick and was often heard to "cry" for his former masters.

A DAILY PRAYER.—Thou has asked us to request great things of Thee; so we pray Thee to remove all despair, sin, fear and doubt.

Goliath is John McGraw, and David is Manager Harris. History seems not about to repeat itself.

Well Walter Johnson will be among the baseball immortals, if he did fail to win twice of late.

It may be when people neglect their business others might look after it for them. They might but will they?

Did the bolt of Brookhart from the republican party have any connection with the recent rise in wheat, corn and rye prices?

If the world series should get tied up and continue indefinitely, there will be little money left to contribute toward the election of Mr. Davis.

Press reports from abroad tell of prolonged cheering in the Fatherland at the mention of the name of Woodrow Wilson. But none of the ex-members of the imperial government were the cheer leaders, it is said with emphasis.

Democrats are using "words to cloak their meaning, and simply for the purpose of capturing votes," says T. R., Jr. Another statement that sounds very tame out of the present Roosevelt.

A PUBLIC SERVICE PERFORMED WHEN SCHOOL BOOKS WERE PROVIDED

The movement of those determined to furnish school supplies for needy children was a good and timely one. So frequently have the school text books been changed of late years, that it has become a real burden for many families to buy books for their children who attend school. Time was when the younger children used the books of their elder brothers and sisters.

In some states there is a provision in law allowing children whose parents are financially unable to buy school books, for them to be furnished with money taken from the public funds. It is quite possible, in accordance with the modern opinion to the effect that the state should do all within its power to see that every child gets an education, that free school books will be furnished for all the school children of the state, at some future time.

It speaks well for the public spirit of the people of the Twin Cities that they contributed liberally to the school book fund. And it is a credit to the Kiwanis club, that it took the initiative in having an opportunity given to the public to contribute to a worthy cause.

UNRELENTING INVENTORS

Science and invention combined are gradually but none the less unrelentingly piercing the veil of the Mysterious Unknown. By and by there will be no secrets. Every day sees some long-standing theory shot full of holes.

For instance, there is the new motive picture camera, which takes 25,000 pictures a second as against the camera that made but three hundred exposures a second. By means of this new machine the inventor, a Frenchman, has been enabled to give the world a most magnificent discovery. It shows that a soap bubble, hit by a paper wad, admits the wad, closes the hole and does not burst until the paper wad passes out through the other side of the bubble.

For ages the world has been stumbling blindly along in the belief that the bubble was burst by the initial impact of the paper wad. Such, it seems, is not the case. Think how many years civilization has waited for this new fact. But it was worth waiting for, was it not? Or was it?—Detroit News.

THE SEARCH FOR THE "MOTHER LODE."

History threatens again to repeat itself. From a somewhat remote California town there comes an item, inconspicuously displayed by those newspapers which saw fit to publish it, that by chance miners who were working in a shaft long abandoned had discovered the lost "mother lode." Upon the truth or falsity of that report much may depend. If it is true, there may be witnessed again, as in former days, the mad rush for gold which began in 1849, or thereabout, and continued intermittently until it was announced that the bonanza mines of California and Nevada had been "worked out" and that the vein of the mother lode had been lost somewhere between the Comstock at Virginia City, and the neighboring California counties.

It has been the dream of prospectors that some day, by some fortuitous happening, they might rediscover this treasure lode, known to bear gold and silver of almost inestimable value. But by some strange freak of the volcanic structure which carried the vein it seemed to be irretrievably buried in the mazes of the high Sierras. Men have, one by one, abandoned their weary task, leaving to others what seemed the almost hopeless search. But now, according to reports, by chance apparently as remote as when "Jim" Butler's mule kicked off the shallow cap that hid the rich ore body at Tonopah, the dream of at least one persistent miner along the abandoned mother lode trail has been realized.

It is interesting, assuming the reported rediscovery of the ore body to be true, to imagine the effect upon adventuresome men and women in all parts of the world. Compared with the means employed to reach the scene in the years following the original discovery of gold in California, the methods of travel now are capable of bringing to the section a million persons where ten were able to reach it in the earlier days. Railway trains, motor cars, airplanes and racing water craft would bring a million, or even more, fortune hunters to the spot almost overnight.

But there can never, except in counterfeit, be reproduced the mining camp of the days of Bret Harte and Mark Twain. Then men worked stubbornly and continuously with pick and shovel, happy if by their industry they could wring from the stubborn earth a few yellow dollars. Today, with the possibility of applying the tremendously powerful machinery which has been developed, the camp would become a bedlam.

There have been, in recent years, many rumors that the mother lode had been relocated. As often has disillusionment followed. But it is not unreasonable to hope that now, or at some time in the future, the lost vein will be "picked up." Geologists agree that the interruption of its course indicates only a "fault," but that no known process exists by which the line can be accurately traced. Its rediscovery must be by a simpler method.—Christian Science Monitor.

THE PEOPLE WANT SATISFACTION ABOUT THAT BASEBALL BRIBE

The question is being raised by lovers of baseball throughout the country, "Whose $500 was it, that a New York player offered for a certain Philadelphia game?" The real fans are not satisfied with the discharge of O'Connell, an outfielder of the New York team and of Dolan, a coach.

O'Connell says "the whole New York team understood about the bribe money before it was offered. It is unusual for an outfielder to be carrying $500 of his own money around on a baseball diamond. The story goes that in a casual manner Philadelphia's shortstop was asked for $500 "to throw" the game in question, to make sure the Giants won the National League championship and the right to enter the world series.

O'Connell claims he was acting for others—who were the "others," will be asked by baseball well-wishers until a more definite answer is given. It is said that Judge Landis states there will be "no sweeping investigation." Until the high commissioner of baseball gives some good reasons for not having a further investigation, the baseball fans will not be satisfied.

The president of the National league has been quoted as saying that "everything has been cleared up" in connection with the charge of the Philadelphia shortstop. Everything is about as clear as "mud" concerning the unusual transaction.

The American public hopes the matter will be cleared up. But until it is shown to be the usual and perfectly natural thing for an outfielder to be carrying $500 in his pocket while in uniform, grave doubts will arise, and many will wonder if President Johnson of the American League was not right in all he said, in all he attempted to do.

Baseball is taken seriously. The American people are in earnest desperately in earnest about it being a clean sport. There will be no let up in the demands for a satisfactory explanation as to just why a Philadelphia shotstop was offered $500.

ROUND-THE-WORLD THRILLS

It was expected that the American round-the-world fliers would complete their trip successfully. Such elaborate preparations had been made to aid them and rescue them if anything went wrong that sometimes Americans felt as if much of the sporting quality of the venture had been lost. It develops, however, that there was considerable danger and thrill and romantic adventures in the undertaking after all.

Lieut. Wade reports that the most interesting part of the trip to him was the crossing of the Taurus mountains in Asia Minor, where the machines had to fly single file through a narrow gorge, the wings of the planes nearly touching the sides, and with heavy clouds hanging overhead, while a rushing torrent foamed beneath them.

Lieuts. Nelson and Harding found it thrilling to see pieces of metal and piston rings fly out of the exhaust pipe when an exhaust valve guide broke while they were over the Sind desert, 55 miles from Karachi, India. In the face of such circumstances they admit they were a little uneasy, due to the fact that the country 6,000 feet below was nothing but rough, sandy desert in all directions, and a forced landing on the rolling, hilly and cactus-infested sands would probably wreck the plane.

In French Indo-China, while passing along the edge of a monsoon, Lieuts. Smith and Arnold found themselves saved from ennuui by the sudden appearance of smoke pouring out of their engine. While Smith was making the necessary landing, Arnold seized a fire extinguisher, climbed out of his cockpit, scrambled over the struts of the plane, despite a heavy gale, and got down to the bottom of the engines. He had the fire out promptly upon alighting, even before Smith had climbed out of his seat. A broken part was replaced by a new one brought 50 miles overland on a donkey's back.

And so it goes, through raging blizzards, in regions of everlasting ice, over scorching deserts and across great seas. The American people are glad these men are safely back again, they are glad that Americans made the first flight circling the globe. The length of individual hops, the flying time, the number of gallons of oil and gas consumed. But tell us some more about the things of which these brave adventurers are an occasional "kick."—Tuscaloosa News.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin, but the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. When Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, kills Peter in a quarrel suspicion falls on Oliver. A trail of blood is found leading from the body to his doorway. Even Rosamund believes him guilty. Desiring to protect Lionel, Oliver can only protest his innocence; but he obtains from the justices a document, to be produced in case of trial, attesting to the fact that he bears no mark of recent wound; that therefore the trail of blood, obviously that of the murderer, is not his. A few weeks later trial threatens; and Lionel, crazed with fear that Oliver will reveal the truth, hires a pirate sea-captain, Jasper Leigh, to abduct him and sell him as a galley-slave. With Oliver's disappearance it is assumed he has fled to escape trial. Out at sea Leigh offers, for a price, to take Oliver back to England, and is about to turn back when a great Spanish ship bears down upon them, her guns in action. The Swallow, unarmed, is sunk.

From ambush Sakr-el-Bahr, the Hawk of the Sea, directs his own two galleys in an attack on a Spanish ship which has drifted into a haven on the northern coast of Africa. The Spaniard, unprepared, surrenders after a brief engagement.

Of the others Sakr-el-Bahr made short work. He offered the privilege of ransom himself to any who were claimed by three. The rest he consigned to the care of Biskayne, who acted as his kayia, or lieutenant. But before doing so he bade the ship's boys stand forward, and demanded to know what slaves there might be aboard. There were, he learned, but a dozen, employed upon menial duties on the ship—three Jews, seven Moslems, and two heretics—and they had been driven under the hatches when the peril threatened.

By Sakr-el-Bahr's orders these were dragged forth from the blackness into which they had been flung. The Moslems, upon discovering that they had fallen into the hands of their own people and that their slavery was at an end, broke into cries of delight and fervent praise of Allah, than whom they swore there was no other God. The three Jews, like stalwart young men in black tunics that fell to their knees and black skull-caps upon their curly black locks, smiled ingratiatingly, hoping for the best since they were fallen into the hands of people who were nearer akin to them than Christians and allied to them, at least, by the bond of common enmity to Spain and common suffering at the hands of Spaniards.

The two heretics stood in stolid apathy, realizing that with them it was but a case of passing from Charybdis to Scylla, and that they had as little to hope for from heathen as from Christian. One of these was a sturdy, bow-legged fellow, whose garments were little better than rags; his weather-beaten face was of the color of mahogany and his eyes of a dark blue under tufted eyebrows that once had been red—like his hair and beard—but were now thickly intermingled with grey. He was spotted like a leopard on the hands by enormous dark brown freckles.

Of the entire dozen he was the only one that drew the attention of Sakr-el-Bahr. He stood despondently before the corsair, with bowed head and his eyes upon the deck, a weary, dejected, spiritless slave who would as soon die as live. Thus some few moments during which the stalwart Moslem stood regarding him; then as if drawn by that persistent scrutiny he raised his dull, weary eyes. At once they quickened, the dullness passed out of them; they were bright and keen as of old. He thrust his head forward, starting in his turn; then in a bewildered way he looked about him at the ocean of swarthy faces under turbans of all colors, and back again at Sakr-el-Bahr.

"God's light!" he said at last, in English, to vent his infinite amazement. Then reverting to the cynical manner that he had ever affected and effacing all surprise:

"Good day to you, Sir Oliver," said he. "I suppose ye'll give yourself the pleasure of hanging me."

"Allah is great!" said Sakr-el-Bahr impassively.

CHAPTER X THE RENEGADE

How it came to happen that Sakr-el-Bahr, the Hawk of the Sea, the Moslem rover, the scourge of the Mediterranean, the terror of Christians and the beloved of Asad-ed-Din, Basha of Algiers, would be one and the same as Sir Oliver Tressilian, the Cornish gentleman of Penarrow, is at long length set forth

In the chronicles of Lord Henry Conde.

Sir Oliver was one of a score of men who were rescued from the sea by the crew of the Spanish vessel that had sunk the Swallow; another was Jasper Leigh, the skipper. All of them were carried to Lisbon, and there handed over to the Court of the Holy Office. Since they were heretics all—or nearly all—it was fit and proper that the Brethren of St. Dominic should undertake their conversion in the first place.

Sir Oliver came of a family that never had been famed for rigidity in religious matters, and he was certainly not going to burn alive if the adoption of other men's opinions upon an extremely hypothetical future state would suffice to save him from the stake. He accepted Catholic baptism with an almost contemptuous indifference. As for Jasper Leigh, it will be conceived that the elasticity of the skipper's conscience was no less than Sir Oliver's, and he was certainly not the man to be roasted for a trifle of faith.

No doubt there would be great rejoicings in the Holy House over the rescue of these two unfortunate souls from the certain perdition that had awaited them. It followed that as converts to the Faith they were warmly cherished, and tears of thanksgiving were profusely shed over them. So much for their heresy. They were completely purged of it, having done penance in proper form at an Auto held on the Rocío at Lisbon, candle in hand and sanbenito on their shoulders. The Church dismissed them with her blessing and an injunction to persevere in the ways of salvation.

Now this dismissal amounted to a rejection. They were, as a consequence, thrown back upon the secular authorities, and the secular authorities had yet to punish them for their offense upon the seas. No offense could be proved. It is true. But the courts were satisfied that this lack of offense was but the natural result of a lack of opportunity. Conversely, they reasoned, it was not to be doubted that with the opportunity the offense would have been forthcoming. Their assurance of this was based upon the fact that when the Spaniard fired across the bows of the Swallow as an invitation to heaven, she had kept upon her course. Thus, with unanswerable Castilian logic was the evil conscience of her skipper proven.

Captain Leigh protested on the other hand that his action had been dictated by his lack of faith in Spaniards and his firm belief that all Spaniards were pirates to be avoided by every honest seaman who was conscious of inferior strength of armaments. It was a plea that won him no favor with his narrow-minded judges.

Sir Oliver fervently urged that he was no member of the crew of the Swallow, that he was a gentleman who found himself aboard her very much against his will, being the victim of a villainous piece of trepanning executed by her venal captain. The court heard his plea with respect, and asked to know his name and rank. He was so very indiscreet as to answer truthfully. The result was extremely educative to Sir Oliver; it showed him how systematically conducted was the keeping of the Spanish archives. The court produced documents enabling his judges to rectify to him most of that portion of his life that had been spent upon the seas, and many an awkward little circumstance which had slipped his memory long since, which he now recalled, and which certainly was not calculated to make his sentence lighter.

Had he not been in the Barbados in such a year, and had he not there captured the galleon Maria de la Dolores? What was that but an act of villainous piracy? Had he not scuttled a Spanish carack four years ago in the bay of Funchal? Had he not been with that pirate Hawkins in the affair at San Juan de Ulloa? And so on. Questions poured upon him and engulfed him.

He almost regretted that he had given himself the trouble to accept conversion and all that it entailed at the hands of the Brethren of St. Dominic. It began to appear to him that he had but wasted time and escaped the clerical fire to be dangled on a secular rope as an offering to the vengeful gods of outraged Spain.

So much, however, was not done. The galleys in the Mediterranean were in urgent need of men at the time, and to this circumstance Sir Oliver, Captain Leigh, and some others of the luckless crew of the Swallow owed their lives, though it is to be doubted whether any of them found the matter one for congratulation. Chained each man to fellow, ankle to ankle, with but a short length of links between them, they formed part of a considerable herd of unfortunates who were driven across Portugal into Spain and thence southward to Cadiz.

SUNDAY SCHOOLCLASS ENTERTAINED

The T. E. L. Class of the Central Baptist Sunday school were very pleasantly entertained by Mrs. C. A. Worthington and Mrs. David Gibson on Tuesday afternoon. Their home of West Gordon Drive was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers.

Mrs. C. T. Sewell read and discussed the "Faith" chapter of the Bible which is the 11th chapter of Hebrews and this was very much enjoyed and appreciated.

In the absence of the president the business session was ably presided over by Mrs. E. H. Nelson. A number of pleasing reports were read by the different officers on the class work.

During the social hour, Mrs. Buckles the teacher of the class conducted a quiz on the Old Testament after which little Wilson Beauchamp sang a beautiful solo. Both of these were delightful. An ice course was served to the thirteen members present by the hostesses.

CLASS SOCIAL

The Fidelis Class of the Central Baptist church taught by Mrs. Seneca Burr will hold a social on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Matlock.

There will be an election of officers at this time.

MARRIED LADIESBRIDGE CLUB

The members of the Married Ladies Bridge club were entertained by their president, Mrs. J. L. Echols on Wednesday afternoon at the first meeting after the summer vacation.

At the bridge game, Mrs. R. G. Corntner made highest score and was presented the prize.

Among the out of town guests who were present at the Malone-Phinizy wedding which took place this morning were Mr. and Mrs. L. B. McWilliams of Birmingham, Misses Lucille Phinizy and Mildred Martin also of Birmingham.

Mrs. Felton Lile is reported doing nicely following an operation at the Benevolent hospital and has been removed to her home on Seventh avenue West.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Williams visited friends in Trinity and on Trinity Mountain on Wednesday.

Miss Grace Gibbons left Tuesday for a short visit to relatives in Pulaski, Tenn.

Mrs. O. F. Gibbons will leave Friday to spend a month with her mother at Nashville Tenn.

Mrs. Winston E. Walker of Albertville, Ala., is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. T. E. McElrath.

Mrs. A. W. Reams, Mrs. B. A. Turner, and Mrs. Hatfield returned Wednesday night from a visit to Birmingham.

Miss Sadye Brown of Huntsville was a shopping visitor here on Wednesday, returning home this morning.

Mrs. Oscar Loosier and children, Everett and Frances returned home Wednesday having visited relatives in Lawrence County.

A. Z. Gautreaux of Baton Rouge, La., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. Van Riper en route to points in Tennessee and Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. Teedat of Chicago, Ill., are the guests of Mrs. A. Smith.

Child-birth

JUST how to ease much unnecessary suffering for yourself is one of the most important things in the world for you to know, right now, mother-to-be! Learn the simple truth: follow the simple method of an eminent physician who dedicated his life's work to this great accomplishment for your benefit!

"I was in labor only 25 minutes with my last child, but suffered agonies with three previous children," writes an enthusiastic mother who used "Mother's Friend."

Right now, from this day on, and right up to the day of childbirth "Mother's Friend" should be used.

and lounge lizards," could be found among the boys, but for every one of them he could find one hundred clean upright boys who have an ambition to make something in the world that means progress.

The breakdown of the young life and their indifference to the church is not born in them, but has come through the utter indifference of the parents as is seen by the children, he said.

"Young people can be tied on to the regular program of the church but will not stand for the so-called old-time religion as some term it that is to void all activities that go to make up the young life of today.

"Church statisticians make the alarming statement that the church is ultimately losing eighty-five per cent of the children who have passed through the Sunday schools. The reason for such conditions is that the child is watching the life of the parent and as father and mother send the child to Sunday school instead of taking it, and as the child sees the parent go to church in the morning and refrain from attendance at night and sees no interest in the prayer meeting, the child very naturally concludes there is no genuineness and reality to their profession.

"If parents believed what they claim to believe, their children would have more respect for the church and claims of Christ on their lives.

Newer Form of Iron is Red Blood Food

If your blood is thin, pale and watery, keeping you weak, nervous and run-down, you need rich, red blood with plenty of iron in it to give you strength, energy and endurance. It would surely astonish you to know how in two short weeks a little more iron in your blood would help renew the elasticity, the strength and energy of earlier days. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the good out of your food. Without iron, nothing you eat does you any good. Your food simply passes through you and your body is literally starving on three big meals a day.

This newer form of iron known as Nuxated Iron is like the iron in fresh vegetables and like the iron in your blood is concentrated form. It may be had from all druggists with a guarantee of entirely satisfactory results or money back.

WHY NOT?

WE'VE HELPED you not once but many times and we'll all help again—the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., schools, churches and other community activities. We did so and we will do so again because we live here, pay taxes here, carry large stocks here—"it's our own town"—it's been a privilege to contribute and a duty we owe those who are in our midst.

But, when we find peddlers with swatches, selling clothes, it makes us begin to wonder. Overcoats, suits, hose and what-not being ordered right and left. Our stocks are jam-up with new merchandise, all sorts and qualities and at fair prices.

People buy it from out of town, giving orders to travelling peddlers—they're doing it right now. Ask the T. P. what he has contributed to "your" town. Did he ever give to the church, your Y. M. C. A., your local Red Cross, your schools or other activities?

Before you give your order to an out-of-town agent we really feel it's your duty, for more reasons than one, to give your own home merchant an opportunity to bid on the business. Let's be fair.

If the shoe were on the other foot wonder if you wouldn't feel the pinch? If we're good enough to give our dollars to help you and those things you are interested in aren't we good enough to have your business, or at least a try at the order for your new fall suit of clothes?

Soggy Biscuits and Indigestion

From time immemorial, leavening gas has made the "touch" which made the paste of flour and water a digestible food—the staff of life. A flat and soggy loaf or biscuit is an unleavened food. So it is that leavening agents such as yeast or baking powder are employed.

To insure to the American housewife complete leavening of her biscuits, cakes, muffins, etc., which is so important to perfect digestion, the pure food authorities found it wise to require a certain standard of leavening strength in baking powder.

To maintain this guaranty of digestibility—to insure minimum deterioration of leavening strength, baking powder is packed in tin. This prevents absorption of atmospheric moisture. Dampness produces premature reaction in the can—results in loss of leavening gas.

The food official, would properly condemn baking powder if packed in cheap sacks.

But what about self rising flour? It comes to the southern housewife from remote northern mills packed in porous bags. What happens to this mixture of baking materials and flour?

Chemical analysis shows that much of it has lost its leavening strength before it reaches the consumer.

Adstuffs made with such self-rising flours cannot rise properly—they come to the table heavy, flat, and soggy.

Why don't the pure food officials demand that self-rising flours contain 0.5% leavening gas, the equivalent to the 12% required of baking powder?

Calumet Baking Powder is scientifically and legally correct—the last spoonful is as pure and sure as the first.

New York Letter

by Lucy Jeanne Price

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Ten thousand and more people have disappeared in this city since last January, according to the figures of the Missing Persons Bureau of our Police Department. A whole city of them just dropped from sight. If a community of that size were to be swept away from human knowledge it would be heralded as a world catastrophe. And the fact that these 10,000 represent that many families means a great many more people affected than would be true in the case of the particular community. It's a pretty awful thought to those of us who find New York fair and smiling and above board. The only comfort is that maybe a lot of the people are exactly where they wanted to be and had what seemed to them good reason for dropping out of sight of their own circle.

Poetry ought to indicate some spring in a person's soul that should win leniency from a court. So argued one Robert E. Lee, who was hailed before the judge on a charge of larceny. It was a pretty poem and certainly a moral one which he wrote in the courtroom and doffered to the judge as reason why he should be given merciful consideration. It reads:

"The truth is a delight,
"It will bring you out right,
"For fooling with the law is no fun,
"But you'll be all right
"If you are number one."

It was a cold hearted and unpoetical judge, however, who held him for $2,500 bail in spite of his artistry.

There undoubtedly is not another actor in the world who realizes the amount of expression character and talent that can be put into a pair of feet, or probably who could put them there if he did realize it, as does George Abbott. In "Lazybones," at the Vanderbilt theater, the kindly, idle, nee-loving, life-appreciating Steve Tuttle is made as real in every move of George Abbott's feet as it is in every other factor of his splendid acting. It is not exaggeration or burlesque, it is just unusual evidence of what can be done by an actor who "feels" a character all the way through. The whole cast deserves mention for the truthfulness of portrayal, with the result that this play of a small town in Maine is the sort of thing we have been waiting for this season. If you want to see what bitterness can do to life, and what kindness can do, see "Lazybones." Martha Bryan Allen proves in it once again what the critics said last year, that a new star in the person of a young girl has come upon our stage.

Benjamin Lehrfield will never dread "hold-up" men. He has experienced one with a reverse English that has attracted him to the profession. A man rushed into his cigar store yesterday, thrust a roll of bills at him, exclaiming, "Hold it," and rushed out again. The roll amounted to $285 and when Lehrfield closed shop last night he was still holding it, with no sign of the man's return.

Maybe it's true that men can't appreciate talent in the women they love. One of our supposedly keen-seeing music publishers—none other than Sol Bloom, who is also one of our congressmen—had some songs brought to him a few years ago by a beautiful young woman. They'd never go, he told her reluctantly. They did, however, make them sell. But before long he married the beautiful young lady. After a few years, Mrs. Bloom ventured that even if they wouldn't sell, she'd love to see one of her songs in print. It was love against professional judgment but love won, and confident it would be a failure, the publisher never-the-less put on the market just to please his wife. It became one of the hits of the year.
